GEN. DAWES IS ANXIOUS FOR DAKOTA FLING

Will Speak to Republican Headquarters About Sending Him Up to City

MRS. CARY RETURNS

Mandan Woman Plans on Meeting of Republican Women at Minot Oct. 10

That Charles G. Dawes, Republican vice-presidential candidate, is anxious to come to North Dakota and probably will do so is the announcement made by Mrs. L. N. Cary of Mandan, Coolidge women's campaign director for North Dakota.

Simultaneously with this announcement Mrs. Cary issued a call for a state-wide Republican women rally to be held at Minot, October 10.

The State Federation of Women's Clubs of which Mrs. Cary is president and state library association meets there early next week and Mrs. Cary seized on opportunity when women throughout the state will be in Minot to call meeting day following two conventions.

Mrs. Cary returned yesterday from Chicago where she had been in conference with the Republican leaders. "Gen. Dawes is a wonderful character. Gruff, bluff and dynamic he has a tremendous personality," she said. "Due to the fact that the Dawes plan has already restored stability in Europe and is largely responsible for increased prices on grain stuffs, Dawes should hold a tremendous appeal for the thousands of North Dakota citizens of German descent and when I suggested that he come to address them he declared he would 'speak to the boys' about it."

The meeting at Minot will be called at 10 o'clock, October 10, with Mrs. Mary Hight of Chicago as the principal speaker. A general conference of all Republican women workers will be held in the afternoon while in the evening a public mass meeting will be conducted. Mrs. E. V. Goss, Minot, Republican woman's chairman for Ward county, is making preliminary arrangements.

"Silk Hat Harry" Takes Exception to His Monicker at National Meeting

Kenmare, N. D., Oct. 4.—Amid cries of "use it for lunch," "a lot of us are broke," "send it to the California defense fund" and "why not use it for general defense," the annual convention of the Agricultural Workers International Union Number 10, Industrial Workers of the World, adjourned late yesterday afternoon after nearly two hours of discussing and arguing as to what disposition should be made of the $50 which had been presented to the organization by Mayor C. E. Blood of Kenmare, consisting, he said, a gift from Kenmare business men.

The convention was reconvened this morning for the consideration of other business, with the $50 remaining in the possession of officials of the meeting and its disposition still undetermined.

After undergoing a hectic session yesterday forenoon, consumed for the most part by heated arguments over the proposition of whether deputy sheriffs should be allowed to remain in the convention hall, the meeting got under way early in the afternoon for what proved to be another session of a multitude of motions, amendments, amendments to the amendments and substitutes for the whole and arguments which were emphasized by the waving of arms, hammering of fists on chairs and other gestures.

"Silk Hat Harry" took occasion to notify his brothers that his name was O'Hare and he took exception to the monicker of "Silk Hat Harry." "Dinty Moore" seems to be a favorite name and the man answering to that name was placed in nomination for practically every office filled by the convention but declined an equal number of times.

BLIND WOMAN RISKS LIFE TO SAVE BABY AS HORSE DASHES DOWN CITY STREET, FRIGHTENED BY MOTOR CAR

Mrs. George Strohl Heroine in Runaway Early Today in Business Section of the City—Baby Escapes Little Hurt While Mother Suffers Severe Injuries

The uncanny intuition which is the gift of the blind and maternal courage today perhaps saved the life of a thirteen months old baby. Putting aside thoughts of her safety, Mrs. George Strohl climbed and fell from a buggy drawn by a runaway horse on a heavily traveled street and nestled her baby in her arms so that the baby escaped unharmed while she was badly bruised and shocked.

The quick wit, courage and intuition of the blind woman came after the horse dashed on—and the motorist went on his way—Mrs. Welliver clung to the reins, tugging and slipping, but as the horse gained momentum in a quarter of a block the reins were jerked out of her hands, and she, terrified, saw the horse running away with Mrs. Strohl and her baby in the buggy.

As the horse came to Fourth street, it turned south, the buggy slid and careened, and the blind woman realized her plight. Knowing not where the runaway horse was taking her, but seized with terror at the thought of what might happen to her baby, she climbed back over the seat, holding the baby to her breast, and slipped from the dashing vehicle as it passed the Rialto theater. She struck the pavement hard, but the baby was cushioned by her body and was little hurt. Passers-by ran out and assisted Mrs. Strohl to safety as other vehicles dashed by.

The horse continued its wild flight on down through the business section until it was stopped.

Both Suffer From Shock
Both Mrs. Welliver, who lives at 115 First street and Mrs. Strohl, who lives at 322 South Ninth street and whose husband is employed at the weather bureau were "kicked to the latter's home. Aside from slight bruises the baby was gurgling as if nothing had happened. Mrs. Strohl was suffering from a cut on the hip and had bruises on the knee, while Mrs. Welliver's arms and shoulders were wracked by her desperate efforts to hold on to the reins on the slippery pavement. Both of the women suffered from shock, but were recovering rapidly.

Washington, Oct. 4.—(By the A. P.)—In the presence of veterans of the First Division of the American Expeditionary Force, President Coolidge dedicated a monument to their dead here today "as a lesson of the supreme blessing of peace with honor, a symbol of stern warning."

The peace now established must be nourished, the President declared, in this country's international relations. The constitution itself must be defended, he said, to preserve individual freedom through noninterference with the courts and fair opportunity by the prevention of government monopoly in business.

While recalling his wish for American membership in the World Court and further disarmament the President warned reference to the county's international relations "that we do not propose to entrust to any other power or combination of powers, any authority to make up our own minds for us."

Tracing the history of the division "the first to enter France and the last to leave Germany," Mr. Coolidge recalled its 5,516 dead and 17,000 wounded, its part in the battle at Somerville sector, Soissons, St. Mihiel and finally in the Argonne.

Discussing the nation's obligation to its war veterans, the President reiterated that its first duty was the care of the disabled and dependent.

For these, he declared, the government had been most liberal, mentioning the hospitalization program, the rehabilitation fund, 40,000 veterans now and 80,000 others "who have completed these courses and have been placed in profitable employment" and the pension laws for widows and mothers.

The nation has appropriated about $300,000,000 for veterans of the world war and is spending about $100,000,000 annually for veterans of the Civil War, Mr. Coolidge said, but added that the "abiding honor which America bestows upon its loyal defenders cannot be measured in money."

When the game was raided the money secured was placed in the vault of the sheriff's offices, and the three gamblers were placed behind the bars. But while they were still in durance, and while the sheriff was absent from his office some one raided the vault and got away with the cash.

BLIND WOMAN RISKS LIFE TO SAVE BABY AS HORSE DASHES DOWN CITY STREET, FRIGHTENED BY MOTOR CAR

Mrs. George Strohl Heroine in Runaway Early Today in Business Section of the City—Baby Escapes Little Hurt While Mother Suffers Severe Injuries

The uncanny intuition which is the gift of the blind and maternal courage today perhaps saved the life of a thirteen months old baby. Putting aside thoughts of her safety, Mrs. George Strohl climbed and fell from a buggy drawn by a runaway horse on a heavily traveled street and nestled her baby in her arms so that the baby escaped unharmed while she was badly bruised and shocked.

The quick wit, courage and intuition of the blind woman came after the horse drawing the buggy in which she and the baby were riding became frightened as a thoughtless motorist drove beside it while Mrs. E. L. Welliver was tying the horse, in front of the McCabe Methodist Episcopal church. Mrs. Welliver was holding the reins, while Mrs. Strohl, who is blind, and her 13-months-old baby, Frances Lola, were seated in the buggy. Frightened, the horse started to run west on Thayer street.

SPECULATORS HIT POOL OF WHEAT, CLAIM

North Dakota Wheat Growers Organ Strikes at Its Accusers in Court

A FARMER'S LETTER

Charges are made in "The Wheat Grower," organ of the North Dakota Wheat Growers Association, that speculators are behind attacks being launched on the organization. The organization, which has headquarters in Grand Forks, indicates a strong fight will be made against the injunctive and receivership action pending in the district court of Kidder county, before Judge Jansonius. Editorially "The Wheat Grower" says:

"Will this insidious undermining from within, prompted and encouraged by the speculators, affect the wheat pool in North Dakota? Much as we deplore it, we will be surprised if this is not attempted. Already job-busters are ever ready to wreck an institution in a spirit of vengeance and these are always able to get a minority following from among chronic disbelievers, who don't feel right unless they are knocking something or somebody."

"It would indeed be a pity if this element succeeded in creating any disturbance of the wheat pool in this state. The majority of the members are loyal boosters, who are delivering wheat to their association every day; they are in this thing to make a real go of it; they realize that it takes time to achieve big results, and they feel keenly about the shortsightedness of their neighbors who refuse to give assistance, or who willfully attempt to disrupt the fine work that has already been done."

"Remember this—the wheat pools will succeed unless they are disrupted from within. The members must throttle any disloyalty at its inception."

John Hinkle of Tuttle, writing in "The Wheat Grower," also assails members attempting to break pool contracts.

He said a bunch of men were getting ready to break their contracts, his letter being dated August 24. Since that time the effort has started. He asserted that if there were no wheat pool the price of wheat would be much less, and declared that some of those who "broke their necks" to get in the wheat pool two years ago when wheat was low have forgotten the change since that time. He asserted 90 percent of the farmers were willing to pool if the slackers will come across.

NATION'S DEBT TO VETERANS OF WAR WILL LAST

President Coolidge, at First Division Unveiling, Pays Tribute

TRACES ITS HISTORY

First in France and Last to Leave Germany, Is Praise Bestowed

Washington, Oct. 4.—(By the A. P.)—In the presence of veterans of the First Division of the American Expeditionary Force, President Coolidge dedicated a monument to their dead here today "as a lesson of the supreme blessing of peace with honor, a symbol of stern warning."

The peace now established must be nourished, the President declared, in this country's international relations. The constitution itself must be defended, he said, to preserve individual freedom through noninterference with the courts and fair opportunity by the prevention of government monopoly in business.

While recalling his wish for American membership in the World Court and further disarmament the President warned in reference to the country's international relations "that we do not propose to entrust to any other power or combination of powers, any authority to make up our own minds for us."

Traces History

Tracing the history of the division "the first to enter France and the last to leave Germany," Mr. Coolidge recalled its 5,516 dead and 17,000 wounded, its part in the battle at Sommeville sector, Soissons, St. Mihiel and finally in Argonne.

Discussing the nation's obligation to its war veterans, the President reiterated that its first duty was the care of the disabled and dependent.

For these, he declared, the government had been most liberal in mentioning the hospitalization program, the rehabilitation furnished 40,000 veterans now and 80,000 others "who have completed these courses and have been placed in profitable employment" and the pension laws for widows and mothers.

The nation has appropriated about $300,000,000 for veterans of the world war and is spending about $100,000,000 annually for veterans of the Civil War, Mr. Coolidge said, but added that the "abiding honor which America bestows upon its loyal defenders cannot be measured in money."

Recognize Debt.

"The nation recognizes towards them all a debt which it can never repay, but which it will never repudiate," the President said. "Standing to their credit will forever be an inexhaustible balance of gratitude, of honor and of praise. In song and story, in tradition and history, they will live in the hearts of the people for evermore."

Count Ten and Then Pull String in Leap from Plane

Two thousand feet in the air, a man in a heavy canvas flying suit crawls from the cockpit and edges his way along the wing of an airplane. Harassed by his chest and back are two bulky packs. He hears the end of the wing, steadies himself a moment as he rises upright, waves one hand at the pilot, then calmly steps backward into space. As the body plunges downward his legs move rapidly, framing the words: "One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten! At ten he jerks a cord at his shoulder and out of the pack billows a great silk parachute. As it fills with air, the speed of the falling man slackens, until finally he is drifting slowly downward for a safe landing. To the beginner, the task of counting to ten while hurtling through space is the most difficult part of parachute jumping—and yet one of the most important. The interval is designed to make sure that the jumper is safely clear of the entangling wires of the airplane before he releases his parachute. The lower picture shows a pilot whose life was saved at McCook Field, Dayton, when an old German war plane which he was piloting broke up high in the air. The pilot leaped clear of the wreckage and landed safely. The picture, taken just after he reached ground, shows, in the lower left-hand corner, the tiny pilot parachute which is released first to pull its big brother out of the packs.

Preventing Sticky Counters

Under certain atmospheric conditions the glass or marble slabs on counters in banks and offices become moist and sticky to such an extent that customers have considerable difficulty in picking up checks, bills and other papers. One bank eliminated this trouble by keeping a can of cheap talcum powder at hand for just such conditions, and a little of it was sprinkled on the counter as occasion arose. Thus papers and bills slid easily on the surface and could be picked up without difficulty.

The oil, coming in contact with steel in hardening, will burn in places, and is hard to remove. The cleaning can be accomplished by immersing the hardened steel in gasoline, and, when exposed to the air, it will dry immediately. This will leave parts to be polished without the marks of burnt oil.

A Serviceable Post-Hole Auger

A serviceable post-hole auger can readily be made by anyone. It consists of a 4 1/2-in. length of 1 1/2-in. pipe. Both ends are slotted with a hacksaw for about 6 in. and bent over and flattened, as shown, so that a handle and a blade can be attached. The handle is made of an 18-in. length of hardwood, about 1 1/2 in. thick, and is securely riveted to the best end of the pipe. A 10-in. steel disk, about 1/2 in. thick, is riveted to the other end, as shown. The blade is cut radially and the edges thus formed are bent to "bite" the soil. A spike, sharpened to a point, is driven into the lower end under the blade and is held in this position by means of a rivet. An auger of this kind has been giving satisfactory service for almost two years.

HOLDS CHURCH MUST BROADEN ACTIVITIES

Rev. Newcomb, Speaking in Jamestown, Outlines the Necessities

FOR SOCIAL WORK

Jamestown, N. D., Oct. 2.—The church of today must reach beyond what many consider its sphere to meet the complex social problems of the day, Rev. George Newcomb of Bismarck said yesterday in delivering an address as president of the North Dakota Baptist Convention. "Can the church reach and save impending broken homes? Can she reach out and save youths that are delinquent before the law? Can she guide the teen age of youth through the adolescent breakers? In a word can the church become of vastly greater service to that unit called the home extending from the baby to the young man or woman ready to step forth into action for better or for worse?" asked Rev. Newcomb.

"We grant the church is organized to receive the ordinary sinner," he continued. "Can she reach and take in the unusual sinner. These terms are used advisedly. The social problems of today are more problematic than ever. The church must not dodge them but boldly meet them and to do this both the ministry and the church must be newly equipped with working tools."

"We have spent much time sitting in court rooms over the country where domestic relations were being considered or where children and youth were under consideration and it has been noted that time and again adjustments of the situations were made by the presiding judge by placing a delinquent girl in charge of a trained worker in some great downtown church; or advice would be given along with the sentence to some young man being committed to the reformatory to attend divine services and thus cultivate a respect for religion and better still accept of religion as brought to him by the chaplain. This reveals that here and there single handed a few churches have broadened their sphere of Christian service and also that the magistrates, long time on the bench as many are, sense the value of religion as a factor to produce a right-about in the lives of men gone wrong."

Social service work on a large scale, reaching into the settlement of problems of youth to aid in solving domestic problems and lessening the number of broken families, was urged by Rev. Newcomb as a proper function for the church.

Rev. E. V. Heiden of Wilton held church services in the Baldwin Presbyterian church Sunday morning.

Interest in the "Digest's" nation-wide Presidential poll is mounting to great heights as the hundreds of thousands of votes are being received and tabulated weekly. An interesting side-light upon the LaFollette strength and whence it is drawn is shown in the "Digest" this week by the opinions and observations of editors throughout the country, especially by those in California.

The "Digest" also carries a detailed record of the previous affiliations of those who vote in this largest of Presidential straw-vote polls, and this record is shown weekly in the tabulations. It will become increasingly illuminating as the vote mounts up. As the Richmond, Virginia, Times-Dispatch says, this poll "is an undertaking of real value." At its conclusion it should point unmistakably to the winner in the Presidential election in November.

ADVANCES MADE BY MOTOR CARS ARE DETAILED

Chevrolet Head Tells of Progress as Shown by Manufacturer of Chevrolet

An understanding of how the remarkable rate of progress is effected in the automobile industry may be had by a study of the story of an individual manufacturer.

The Chevrolet Motor Company, the popularity of whose product has so greatly increased within the last few years, is a fair example.

Commenting on these changes R. H. Grant, vice president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Company said, "It has been the policy of the Chevrolet Motor Company to combine economical transportation with quality."

Some of the more important improvements that add to the performance of the car and to the comfort of the driver are:

Brake drums enlarged from 10 to 14 inches to 11 by 13.4 inches, the use of brake rods instead of cables and a new micrometer adjustable equalizing device in the service brakes;

Alumite lubrication system installed to replace grease cups throughout the car;

Improved steering by use of straight front-axle and tie-rod, and also through the use of a more rigid mounting for the steering gear;

Strength added to rear by using heavier rear axle, substituting ball for roller bearings at the rear wheels and installing a new method of fastening rear springs to axle; This latter also tends to eliminate possible rattles;

Guage rod now used to show level of oil in crank case instead of the pet cocks which were difficult to reach;

Oil pump has been placed back of generator instead of in front to make it more accessible;

Engine has been raised 1.8 inches to give more road clearance;

Piston pins now lapped, giving them a glass finish;

Vanadium steel used for transmission gears and rear springs;

Battery hanger improved; brake and clutch pedal rods shortened;

Improved steering wheel installed with horn button in center; dash lamp added as regular equipment on all models.

From time to time other improvements will be added as fast as they are fully tested and proven desirable, factory officials say.

"HUNCHBACK" TO BE SEEN HERE

All Who Have Seen Great Film Epic Predict Record Success Locally

Bismarck Monday will have its first opportunity of seeing the massive production which swept into over-night fame in New York and made the critics so far forget themselves as to use up nearly the entire stock of laudatory adjectives in the English language in their reviews. As a general rule, success on Broadway does not always spell success here, but local theatre-goers who visited the Astor Theatre in New York, the first of the metropolitan runs, expressed the opinion that the hit will be even greater here, where Hugo's great work is so widely known. Seems like this is a reflection on Gotham's literary learnings.

From all advance accounts Universal has all the ingredients of a great success—a story that is internationally famous, that is replete with action, albeit somewhat gruesome, the greatest of character stars in Lon Chaney, an excellent supporting cast, studio facilities, and unlimited funds. It may be divulging a trade secret, but it has leaked out that Universal, to guard against the least chance of adverse criticism, called in the director of New York's greatest cinema houses and one of the leading newspaper editors and had them do the final touches. The result is said to mark the dawn of a new day in cinema art and one that has made Carl Laemmle's slogan of "Better and finer productions" an absolute fact.

Some idea of the immensity of the production can be obtained when it is stated that the entire Cathedral of Notre Dame was reconstructed at Universal City, as well as eight blocks of Parisian streets and scenes of the time of Louis XI. The total cost was a trifle less than $1,500,000.

A WORD TO TAXPAYERS

According to some of the last issues of the Tribune there must be other cities in the state, besides Dickinson, which can be saved from expensive administration and tax strangulation only by the enactment of the tax limitation initiative law next Nov. 4th. Of course, we must admit that you, Bismarck taxpayers, are 20 per cent better off than we are, as you have one Commissioner on your side, while we—Jove save us—have none; and you have any-how one paper, the Tribune, which true to its name, stands up boldly and splendidly for the common people, while we—old Pluto help us—have none; just the opposite, all in the hands of the taxpayers' oppressors. As to other places, since it is thus with us of the two cities made up of the best people of the state (the Capital city and the Queen city), we can just imagine what must be the still sadder plight of other cities of our state. And it does seem little or nothing can be done to relieve the intolerable tax situation in our communities. You ask, why not? Well, those having the authority and power to levy taxes are too often the very ones who directly or indirectly profit by high taxes, though small taxpayers themselves. And they are a numerous host, related by blood and interest. We need a law against nepotism too. We elect a man to office and soon not only he himself, but his whole family and his wife's distant relatives are in the public employ at good salaries. Yea, when the children come home for a vacation visit, right away they are receiving fine salaries paid by county, city or state or Normal School. What efforts for tax reduction can we expect from people thus favored? And these public beneficiaries are mostly influential folks, and we common folks can do nothing; they just smile derisively at our protests. And so we say: North Dakotans; Fellow Taxpayers! Let us all as one man,

Never Before Such Fine Riding, Say Owners

The Brougham

It is one thing for a car to deliver great performance; quite another to accomplish it with unexampled economy—as does the Chrysler Six. In addition to a new type of combustion chamber that burns all the gas and a new way of distributing the gas equally to all cylinders—which helps to explain why you get better than 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline—there are numerous engineering advances bearing on economy. Destructive vibration has been eliminated and the engine is protected also by the oil-filter and the air-cleaner—all of which means longer life and lower maintenance costs. Special design six-ply, high-speed balloon tires are standard.

Driving and riding in the Chrysler Six is an absolutely new experience, owners will tell you. It is not alone amazing power, speed and dash from an engine only 3-inch bore by 4 1/4-inch stroke that arouse their wonder, or the economy by which these results are obtained.

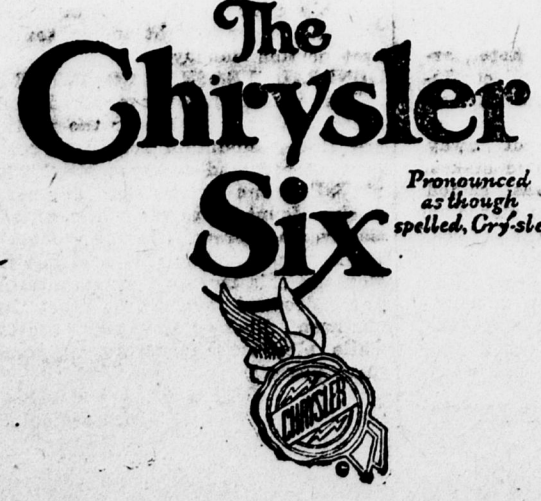

They are tremendously impressed with the riding and driving qualities for they find the Chrysler Six, by reason of unusually low center of gravity, perfect weight distribution, a new practice of spring suspension and other engineering advances, holds the road as securely as a two-ton car.

They find that it takes a turn at 50 miles an hour with perfect safety and without side-sway; and, thanks to its remarkable driving and riding qualities, they can ride all day without fatigue.

Try the Chrysler Six. Drive it at all speeds over all kinds of roads and experience these things for yourself.

We are pleased to extend the convenience of time-payments. Ask about Chrysler's attractive plan. Dealers Everywhere

THE ELTINGE

"Unguarded Women," coming to the Eltinge Theatre Monday and Tuesday has an alluring sound. It smacks of action and drama and love—the three graces that are fundamentally necessary to every photoplay if it is to fulfill its purpose of entertainment.

Knowing that it was adapted from Lucy Stone Terrill's Saturday Evening Post story, "Face," we feel practically safe in assuming that this screen play teems with exciting action, vivid drama and tender love, for all of these elements were part and parcel of the story. Something different in the way of scenery may be expected as much of the action takes place in the bizarre and colorful Far East—Pekin, China, with its Oriental customs and costumes and scenes of Long Island high society.

With a combination of such favorites as Bebe Daniels and Richard Dix and Mary Astor, surrounded by such likeable and capable players as Walter McGrail, Frank Losee and Harry Mestayer, it is only right to say that an all-star cast interprets the various roles.

Coolidge Family Leads Quiet Simple Life In Those Historic Halls Where Lincoln Walked

by MRS. ALVIN T. HERT, Vice-Chairman, Republican National Committee

"The most beautiful house in America is the White House." This was the comment of a woman who recently paid her first visit to the house in which the Chief Executive of this country lives—and it was a real visit.

When the messenger boy brought her an invitation to dine informally with President and Mrs. Coolidge, there came to her mind the same picture which would come to any woman who had read stories of official life in Washington. The brilliant state dining room, glittering chandeliers, military aides in smart uniforms, the trappings of the White House, the Marine band playing in the distance—

But let her tell her own story.

Simplicity Everywhere

"Tremendously thrilled, I took the arm which President Coolidge offered, with the quick, angular movement so characteristic of the man. We entered the quiet, softly lighted dining room. The table was perfectly set with linen and crystal, set off with low bowls of late spring flowers, but it was simple and unimposing. A blackcoated butler was in attendance, but a son of the house drew out his mother's chair.

"Six of us sat down together, four of the name of Coolidge. And instead of martial strains, floating in from the portico, the first sound to meet my ear was the quiet voice of the nation's Chief Executive: 'Mr. Seely, will you say grace?'

"The two Coolidge boys had just returned from school. Even then the father, Alvin, Jr., showed the pallor of his approaching illness, but I attributed it to the strain of the school examinations of which he spoke. In the eyes of the boys, the hope of good home cooking, after months of absence. Recalling the chef in the White House kitchen, I felt a throb of pity for the expectant lady.

"But my sympathy was wasted. The main dish of the dinner was a thick, juicy beefsteak, perfectly broiled and entirely surrounded by French fried potatoes. And for dessert we had custard pie—none of your thin, French pastry pies, but one whose golden custard was nearly two inches thick and smooth as cream.

"All four of the Coolidges displayed a frank interest in this pie, not because they came from New England, but because the White House cook used the recipe supplied by 'Aurora,' housekeeper for Grandfather Coolidge on his Vermont farm.

"It is not yet as good as Aurora makes," explained Mrs. Coolidge, 'but each time it is better. We have hopes.'

"Then, with each member of the family contributing an anecdote or a scrap of description, I heard the story of Aurora who after years of service on the Coolidge farm had been persuaded by a widower-brother to join him in a distant town. He was a busy physician and his home needed a mistress.

"At the end of a year Aurora announced her desire to resume farm life. On her arrival at the Plymouth farm, she offered this simple explanation.

"Automobiles tearing by all the while, tooting their horns. Telephone rings every half hour or so. Made me feel rushed and tired."

"Home Folks"

"From Aurora, on vacation on the farm, and back to school. Amusing pictures, quickly drawn, of the closing hours at Mercesburg. A hundred boys in a mad scramble of sorting luggage and packing it. The younger boy plied his father with questions about Greek fraternities. I asked him if he thought this quite fair to a man who had been out of college so long. Without trace of disrespect he gave me to understand that his father never went stale!

"Listening to this family banter, I visualized thousands of American homes to which young people were returning from school, and I hoped that all of the boys and girls could meet such sympathetic understanding, such a simple, wholesome atmosphere as reigned here in the White House.

"Dinner over, the President conducted us to the northern portico, from which we planned to start on our tour of the White House grounds, those seventeen spreading acres unmarred by artificiality. But a light rain was falling, so we remained under the protection of the lofty roof.

"Glancing up at the Grirling Gibbons carving above the doorway, I recalled talk of remodeling, of modernizing the White House and the idea assumed the proportions of sacrilege. I talked, I might almost say, I thought aloud of the palaces I had seen in Europe, Windsor, Versailles, the Quirinal, those castles built by the Mad Prince. None of them could compare with the White House in its classic colonial beauty and dignity, as a home for our President.

"President Coolidge listened gravely. He is a good listener. He knows how to draw out his visitors. Then on a long pause he raised his head. Looked at a wide open window above the doorway of the home which his country had supplied for him, and spoke quietly—

"Where Lincoln Walked"

"It would be wrong to destroy that hall in which Lincoln walked in the darkest days of the Civil War," he said. "As he paced that hall he looked through this half inch window to the Potomac. I like to walk there now and think of him."

"His words carried me up the great flight of stairs and through the mist of years into that upper hall where Lincoln paced slowly and forth—struggling with the problems which beset his day and his people.

"We re-entered the White House and passed out on the southern veranda which overlooks the Potomac and the Virginia hills. Over the iron balustrade, a mass of honeysuckle had flung itself, its pale yellow blossoms drenching the air with exquisite perfume. Just beyond a magnificent monument shone wanly through the mist lights after suggesting Virginia Arlington, the resting place of our Unknown Soldier.

"We talked quietly, the two boys, their mother and I. The President sat apart in the shadows, motionless, silent, his eyes fixed on the dim outline of Virginia. Thus had Lincoln watched that shore in the perilous 60's.

"The White House is America. Talk of a newer, a more elaborate building to take its place is desecrating," I said suddenly and warmly, to President Coolidge and then I added—

"We must preserve for the people for all time this place where Adams, Madison, Lincoln and others have lived and solved problems that have made America the greatest nation on earth today."

P. C. McCumber, Former Senator, Seriously Ill

Fargo, N. D., Oct. 4. Word received by Wahpeton friends of former Senator P. C. McCumber indicates that he is now slowly recovering from a very serious illness, which involved an operation for the removal of gall stones says The Wahpeton Globe. The senator's condition was very critical, and when the operation was performed it was found necessary to remove the entire gall bladder.

P. H. Myhra has just received a letter from Miss Katharine F. Wagner, the senator's secretary for a number of years, written from Washington in which she says:

"I have just returned from a visit to the senator, the first he had been allowed to receive since his operation over a week ago. While we were led to believe that he was getting along nicely from the first, I am afraid he was closer to death than some of us realized. The wound had been healed nicely from the first, but the shock of the operation added to his already weakened condition was almost too much for him to meet, and for four days it was a question as to whether he or death would win. I hope and believe that if no complications arise, and I don't know of any that could, he will improve and I think he feels hopeful himself now, and you know that when he feels that way half the battle is won. His other organs were in perfect condition and aside from his weakness and emaciation he was quite fit."

"President Coolidge listened gravely. He is a good listener. He knows how to draw out his visitors. Then on a long pause he raised his head. Looked at a wide open window above the doorway of the home which his country had supplied for him, and spoke quietly:—

"Where Lincoln Walked"
"It would be wrong to destroy that hall in which Lincoln walked in the darkest days of the Civil War," he said. "As he paced that hall he looked through this half inch window to the Potomac. I like to walk there now and think of him."

"His words carried me up the great flight of stairs and through the mist of years into that upper hall where Lincoln paced slowly back and forth—struggling with the problems which beset his day and his people.

"We re-entered the White House and passed out on the southern veranda, which overlooks the Potomac, and the Virginia hills. Over the iron balustrade, a mass of honeysuckle had hung itself, its pale yellow blossoms drenching the air with exquisite perfume. Just beyond a magnificent monument shone wanly through the mist. Far lights afar suggested Virginia, Arlington, the resting place of our Unknown Soldier.

"We talked quietly, the two boys, their mother and I. The President sat apart in the shadows, motionless, silent, his eyes fixed on the dim outline of Virginia. Thus had Lincoln watched that shore in the perilous 60's.

"The White House is America. Talk of a newer, more elaborate building to take its place is desecrating, I said suddenly and warmly, to President Coolidge and then I added:—

"We must preserve for the people for all time this place where Adams, Madison, Lincoln and the others have lived and solved problems that have made America the greatest nation on earth today."

ting along nicely from the first, I am afraid he was closer to death than some of us realized. The wound had been healed nicely from the first, but the shock of the operation added to his already weakened condition was almost too much for him to meet, and for four days it was a question as to whether he or death would win. I hope and believe that if no complications arise, and I don't know of any that could, he will improve and I think he feels hopeful himself now, and you know that when he feels that way half the battle is won. His other organs were in perfect condition and aside from his weakness and emaciation he was quite fit."

STILL SATISFACTORY

The Literary Digest presidential poll, which has proved remarkably accurate in the past, continues to report "all's well" with the campaign for Calvin Coolidge. There is a slight decrease in the Coolidge vote as compared to the Harding vote of four years ago, but the decrease is so slight with 689,019 ballots cast, that the apparent trend toward the President is nothing short of remarkable. Harding went into office with the greatest popular majority ever polled, something over 8,000,000 lead over James Cox, the Democratic candidate. No such landslide has been expected for the Republican candidate, yet his vote continues to be close to that of Harding four years ago.

Returns from eighteen states in the poll show the President is leading in every state except Virginia and Texas, where Davis is ahead, and Wisconsin, where LaFollette polls a plurality. The Davis vote continues remarkably low. The showing made by the Democratic party is so bad that it lends great weight to the statement of Chairman Butler of the Republican National Committee that at the election Coolidge will poll a tremendous Democratic vote from those who wish to avoid the chaos that would result from throwing the election into the House of Representatives.

The Literary Digest poll, accepting it at face value, indicates Senator LaFollette will get a large vote in the country, but not enough to do what he hopes to do—tie up the election in the national legislature so that he may by using balance of power methods decide who shall be the next President.

The Literary Digest is charged with polling the "silk stocking" class as an explanation for the Coolidge vote. It also is charged by those who declare LaFollette is showing disproportionate strength in the poll that it is natural that LaFollette supporters should hurry in their votes, because they are seeking to create the impression that he has a chance of election. The poll probably is fairly representative. It has proved so in the past. And, if it means anything, it means that Calvin Coolidge will be elected President.

DEMOCRACY IN DANGER

Eternal, constant vigilance is the price of liberty. It is a cheap price. To win liberty, the early settlers of the United States had to fight wars—contribute their savings and endanger their lives. To preserve the liberty already attained, all we citizens have to do is vote and vote wisely.

For decades, an increasing percentage of American citizens have been neglecting to vote in the presidential elections. In 1920 this tendency culminated in a situation where over 25 million citizens failed to vote, while less than 27 millions voted.

That election was very close to government by minority. And government by minority imperils our democracy. You know and thrill at what the gallant Minute Man accomplished in Revolutionary days when America was winning its freedom.

Minute Men, to preserve this freedom by arousing the public to the dangers of not voting, are needed now as much as in 1776.

Vote, yourself. And make your self a committee to rouse relatives, friends and strangers with this Liberty Message.

Vote without fail! Vote without fail! Vote without fail! YOUR vote is needed! YOUR vote is needed! YOUR vote is needed!

PRAYER AND PRAYER

Dr. William E. Gilroy's International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Sept. 21 is most interesting, but, in some respects, incomplete.

The crux of Dr. Gilroy's lesson lies in the fact that when at the height of popularity, Jesus went off into a solitary place to pray. "Jesus needed to pray. Grasp that fact well," urges Dr. Gilroy, who doesn't undertake to tell for what Jesus prayed.

What need could urge one who was without sin, one who was clothed with the love, wisdom and might of the All-wise, All-powerful? The answer is, the need of close communion with the Father.

A great many people resort to prayer only when they need something. They ask forgiveness of some certain sin or help in some particular trouble or endeavor, which is right, but they miss much of the comfort and happiness of prayer.

Little Tommy goes to his father with "I want a bicycle," or "I want new shoes," or "I need" this or that. Similar is the appeal of many good religious people to the Father of all. It is one sort of praying.

It is another sort when Tommy climbs up into father's lap with, "You are best of all. Love me. We are father and son, and I want to tell you how I love you." One who has missed such communion has never had all the hope, courage and happiness of prayer to the Father.

WORK IN VAIN

After 46 years of steady work, experts of the French Academy finish revising the dictionary from A to H. Just as they get ready to start on I, it's discovered that the French language has changed so much in 46 years they have to do their work all over again.

Observe, here, a basic principle of life. By the time we "solve" a social or economic problem, we find another problem has arisen. So goes the merry-go-round.

FORD'S ORGANIZATION

Henry Ford now has over 14,000 dealers throughout the world, selling his cars. Almost 10,000 of them are in America.

This certainly is a stupendous organization, and some may consider it the eighth wonder of the modern world.

Russia reminds us of a poor family in a rich neighborhood.

POLITICAL PANIC IN NORTH DAKOTA

The best evidence of the turn of North Dakota in the direction of Coolidge is in the newly apparent doubt in the minds of the LaFollette managers of the certainty of success in November. This doubt is shown in the refusal of the LaFollette manager to file with the secretary of state the resignations of the four LaFollette electors, as agreed on at the state central committee meeting in Bismarck on September 3. At that time no sure were the LaFollette group that the state was lost to Coolidge, that they agreed to withdraw their nominees for elector from the Republican column and place them in the individual nominations column of the ballot under the names of LaFollette and Wheeler. But as the campaign has progressed, warning signs have indicated to the radicals that they had no such certainty. To assure themselves of it, they have finally decided to leave the LaFollette electors on the Republican column and nominate others to run under the LaFollette heading. This makes it a case of "Heads I win, tails you lose," for the radicals. They thought they had a "sure thing" three weeks ago. Now they want to make it a sure thing by having both sets of electors LaFollette adherents.

To end this situation, Coolidge Republicans brought action on Monday before the Supreme court asking it to end a "procedure fraught with fraud and deceit," and to oust the radical electors from the Republican column. Whether the court grants the petition, or not, the stand of the radicals is a public confession that they fear to put the issue to the test in North Dakota and that their cocksureness of the past few months has been followed by a desperate grasping at every tactical advantage that promises success. Even here they lose, for no people will sympathize with any legal trick that wounds a Republican. North Dakota is a Republican state, and the practical disfranchisement him, nor will the odium of such a course fail to attach itself to the radical managers.

WHEAT PRICES—PRESENT AND FUTURE

Among the causes for strength in wheat and other grain prices, is the shortage of the European crop. Wheat in Canada is also a factor, and Winnipeg prices are steadily advancing.

The extent of the foreign shortage has been more clearly revealed in the last two weeks, which accounts for the large export sales. Judging by the world's shortage of wheat in the United States on the farm, is cheap at present prices. If the natural conditions of its sale are not obstructed by exporting firms and buying combinations, operating through the machinery of boards of trade, wheat, rye and other grain food should show higher prices in the next few weeks, and much higher before another crop can be harvested.

The French wheat crop, according to the London Daily Mail, Paris edition, quoting French estimates, is 22,400,000 cwt. short, or about 40,000,000 bushels. The crop, both in France and North Africa is said to be at least that much short of the minimum requirements, which will have to be bought and sold in the street markets. The active bidding for American wheat the past week, and the advance in the face of rush of grain to market.

The price of bread is the most pressing problem the new government in France has to meet. As showing the extremities of the wheat shortage situation the French cabinet has ordered the prefects of France to enforce flour prices, to conform to recent regulations, and to increase the sale of meat and bread in the street markets. Strict laws to enforce food prices will be passed and an urgent appeal is made to all honest traders to aid in defeating speculation in food stuffs. Millers are instructed to grind coarser flour so as to waste as little grain as possible. The Daily Mail adds: "It is recognized however, that vast financial commitments will be necessary to cover the cost of purchase and transport of this wheat."

All of this has a direct bearing on North Dakota wheat grower this year. With less than one-third of the crop threshed in spite of the weather damage, the bulk of the crop should bring a much better price than now prevails; and competent commission firms, and others in the grain trade, as well as financial institutions and business concerns, look for wheat to sell as high as $1.50 per bushel, on the farm, before spring, and possibly even more.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

THE ROAD TO JUM JUM LAND

The Sand Man and Nancy and Nick went skipping along the road that led from Squeezie Land to Jum Jum Land and the sea.

They were very happy because they had found the lost sleepy sand at last and as it was going on sun-down, it was almost time for the Sand Man to start on his nightly travels over the house-tops. "Oh, the stars are so bright, that shine at night. Peep down like eyes at me, And the Dream Maker Man Works as fast as he can, Picking dreams off the Dreamland Tree."

And the Twins joined in the chorus. "Oh, the Dream Maker Man, Works as fast as he can Picking dreams off the Dreamland Tree."

They were so happy that they never noticed that the road had changed to cakes of soap, and slippery ones at that, for the mischievous gnomes had been at work. Suddenly Nick's feet flew and Nancy's flew and they fell down and rolled against the Sand Man and knocked him over, too, and the sleepy sand flew out of his hands and landed in a field of prickly pears.

Quick as a ball can bounce, Tweek-anose jumped in and picked up the sleepy sand and ran off with it. "Ha, ha, ha! Hee, hee, hee!" the Twins and the Sand Man heard him giggle. "No sleep for the babies tonight!"

"Dear, dear!" said the Sand Man in a worried voice. "Now it's gone again after all our trouble! Here it is almost moon-up and me without a drop of sleepy sand! It's all to do over again. We'll have to go right after that rascal, Tweek-anose, and teach him a lesson."

Nancy and Nick got up and rubbed their bruises and bumps and helped the poor Sand Man to his feet. The slippery soap had disappeared as quickly as it had come.

As they had looked quite closely they would have seen a hundred little gnomes tugging and lugging all the soap cakes back to Gnome-land where Crookabone, the Gnome King, praised them. "I always like to help a friend," he remarked. "I suppose Tweek-anose is miles away by this time. Perhaps he's in the moon. If he goes far enough the Sand Man will surely be out of a job."

When the Twins finished rubbing their bruises, the Sand Man said, "You'll have to take your magic shoes, children, and go to all the cities and turn back the town clocks while I go to the moon and ask the Moon Man to please keep the moon back a little so people won't think it is so late. Perhaps we can still get the sleepy sand in time to put the babies to sleep."

"All right, Mister Sand Man," said Nancy. "And when we've turned all the clocks back, where shall we go?"

"Meet me on the moon at the Dream Maker's," said the Sand Man. "He lives on the edge of the Golden Forest with his three sons, Snoozle and Snuggie and Snore."

"We'll be there," said the Twins. (To Be Continued)

They that sow in tears shall reap in joy.—Ps. 124:5.

Plow deep while sluggards sleep.—Benjamin Franklin.

LETTER FROM JAMES CONDON TO SALLY ATHERTON, CONTINUED

Don't jump at the conclusion, Sally, that I have been making love to a regular married woman. Mabel Carter has not lived with her husband for more than two years. It is one of the greatest tragedies I ever heard that parted them. She tells me that she never really cared whether she was divorced or not, until she fell in love with me.

She had made up her mind before that that she would have nothing more to do with men. One had not only bruised her soul, but had nearly annihilated her body.

I wish you could have seen her when she told me her story. Sally, she is the sweetest, the prettiest little doll of a woman you can possibly imagine—something you want to take in your arms and kiss her tears away. She is exactly the opposite of the great, splendid example of femininity that you are. I always felt young and boyish and immature when I was with you, Sally, but the moment I saw Mabel I wanted to take her in my arms and help her to bear her burdens, if not take them all off of her shoulders.

I am quite sure I have already done this. I wonder if you will remember her, Sally. There was a lot in the papers about her when you and Sam first came here, and she was very badly used, both by the court and the newspapers. She was not at all to blame that her husband was unreasonably jealous of her. He shot that man and tried to kill her, simply because, through a chain of unfortunate circumstances, the man had brought her home from downtown one cold, grizzly night in his limousine.

The murder trial was a sensational one, and the defense tried to make out that the murdered man and Mabel were lovers. But just to look at her, Sally, you would know that could not be.

I will be glad if Mr. Prescott does come over here and take the plant over, for I am sure you will come with him, and then you will be such a help to reinstate Mabel in the eyes of the world. Poor girl, she says her own sex have simply stretched her on the rack of torture, and that she has not a woman friend. I have told her that you are not that kind of a woman, Sally, and that I know you will love her as soon as you have seen her.

I am almost sure that Mr. Hamilton is no better. In fact, I think he grows a little weaker every day, and although as his private secretary I am virtually manager here, and have been ever since he was taken ill, I will be very glad if someone else comes in to take some of the responsibility and hard work away from me. Mabel complains that I am working much too hard, and that I never have a day off except Sunday to be with her. When we go anywhere of an evening I am usually so tired that the moment I have eaten my dinner I want to go to sleep.

She says when she marries again she wants to have a husband who will play around with her. Poor child, I think she has never had much happiness, and I am going to try and give it to her.

You probably know a good deal about this new business deal. I wish you would write me about it; and

EVERETT TRUE

BY CONDO

THE MONEY YOU SPEND

By Albert Apple

How much money did you spend during August? The American people combined spent about 36,000 million dollars. That's enough to give even a mathematician a headache. No human brain can really grasp such a gigantic figure.

It is difficult to understand how times can be dull instead of booming, when you ponder the money spent.

August was a dull month, with thousands out of work and the average person "watching the pennies." Yet 36,000 million dollars spent by the American people during August was 6000 millions more than they paid out in August, 1923, when times were booming.

Spending makes prosperity—creates demand, gives jobs. But why were times better when people spent less?

Americans now are spending at an average rate three times as much as before the war.

This looks as if the cost of living is three times higher than in those good old days when you could buy a Sunday chicken dinner for 35 cents.

The National Industrial Conference Board insists the H. C. L. is 62 per cent (instead of 200) higher than pre-war. The board is not apt to exaggerate in this estimate, for it is the voice of 15,000 employers.

Where do we get this estimate that Americans spent 36,000 million dollars in August? Answer: Bank clearings the country over—the total of all checks written and sent through clearing houses for collection—totaled 35,670 millions. You add 5 per cent, for 95 per cent of business transactions are paid by check, 5 per cent by cash.

Divide total August spendings by the population and it looks as if $316 was spent for every man, woman and child. During one month? It couldn't be. The joker is that there are duplications in the totals. For instance, suppose a factory sells a suit of clothes to a jobber for $50 and he sells it to a retailer for $75 and the retailer passes it on to the consumer for $100. Now, if all pay by check, this $100 suit of clothes will represent $225 in bank check clearings in these three processes of moving it to market. Other duplications creep in, back yonder where the raw materials are collected, transported, etc.

Finance, after all, is simple—as simple as a Chinese puzzle.

New York, Oct. 4.—Just before the World War an ambitious Russian had taken his young daughter to Germany that her eyes, dimmed at birth, might be opened to see the beauties and wonders of a progressing world.

The operation was a success and the girl's sight was restored just as the war broke out. Father and daughter came to America, as had been originally planned, but without returning to Russia for mother and the remainder of the family.

Turnout followed. The mother and babies could not get to the United States. The father, opening a small laundry in New York, slaved and saved for the coming of his flock.

It is related to me that he lived in such frugal fashion that he suffered. Then, a few weeks ago, with all arrangements made for the reunion of his long-separated family, he rented an apartment and furnished it with luxuries such as neither he nor his family ever before had known. No expense was spared to make his loved ones a wonder mansion for his loved ones.

As time for the arrival of the boat came, the young Russian could scarcely contain himself. He longed to take his wife and children to his bosom and nestle them forever—in reward for the years of loneliness.

The boat landed and his family came on the pier. His wife would have nothing to do with him. She would pay no attention, would listen to no idea.

On the journey to America, after her long years of mothering a brood, she fell in love with a younger man and has cast her lot with him.

The husband she had known only in dreams and memory for so long is heartbroken and forsaken. The lavishly furnished apartment has never been opened. Dust an inch thick has settled in it.

Last evening was spent with three generations of an interesting family. The grandfather, 81, plays the piano with nimble fingers; his daughter has bobbed hair, and her son is an aviator.

All three smoke cigars. All spend much time in the open. They live on Long Island in a quaint home, with a spacious garden surrounding it, just 22 minutes from Broadway.

Their home life is as domestic as in any small, western community. Radio, reading and early to bed. Yet they are sophisticated as those whose rooms overlook Times Square. —Stephen Hannagan.

FABLES ON HEALTH—

MAKING POULTICES

Old linen bags, if saved, can be turned into excellent home-made poultice containers for winter service. Mrs. Jones learned at the sewing club.

In making the poultices, fill the bag half full of the poultice mixture and then spread it flat by pressing between the palms.

If a boil or abscess is being treated, place a piece of sterilized linen over the sore; then wet lightly with olive oil and put on the plaster. If the applications must be hot, make several such bags and alternate them. When mustard plasters are used, wet with the white of an egg and the skin is not likely to be blistered. Wrap the poultices in soft flannel to keep in the heat and this also helps to abate severe pain.

To make a mustard poultice mix dry mustard with half its bulk of flour, wet to a soft paste and spread evenly, but keep it thinly distributed over oil and put on the plaster. If above all else, be sure and write Mabel a little note telling her you are glad to see me in love and happy—for to tell the truth, dear, I think she is just a little jealous of you. You and I both know she need not be.

Sincerely yours, JIM.

Convention Nears Close Of Sessions

The sessions for the fourth day of the convention being held at Jamez, Minn., opened by a watch led by Rev. L. McKinnon of Fargo. After the convention business had been attended to, Dr. C. A. ### D. A. R. Head Will Be Honored on Visit To City

Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, President-General of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution will be here October 11. She is enroute to Washington, D. C. from the west coast where she has been for the past six weeks attending the State Conference. Mrs. Cook's home is in Cooksburg, Penn., but she spends the greater share of her time at National Headquarters in Memorial Hall, Washington, D. C. Mrs. Cook is in active sympathy with the most progressive methods of education, an able parliamentarian, a just presiding officer, an executor of established records. Conversant with local, state and national club work, she is admirably equipped to fill the high office of President-General.

Mrs. Wm. S. Walker, organizing secretary general of Seattle, Washington, who with Mrs. Cook is enroute east to attend an Executive meeting and meeting of the Board of Management of the National Society, will also be a guest of the State D. A. R. Besides being active in D. A. R. work for 10 years, she is president and trustee of the Day Nursery of Seattle, one of the largest philanthropic societies of Seattle, an active worker in "The Children's Orthopedic Hospital" and such organizations. Her latest and most notable achievement was the establishing of a University home for young women who are attending the State University. Asked at the North Dakota state conference last spring about this project, she remarked: "Western women can do anything."

North Dakota Daughters of the American Revolution from every chapter in the state will be assembled here on October 11 to meet Mrs. Cook and Mrs. Walker. This patriotic society which began in North Dakota in 1915, has eight chapters and 341 members. Four chapters in the state have 50 or more members. From April 23 to April 24, 10,600 applicants were admitted to the national society, three of these being real daughters. A real daughter is one whose father served in the Revolution. In April this year there were 19 real daughters living in the United States.

There are chapters of the society in every state in the union, including some island possessions. Recently a chapter was organized in China and one in Paris.

Unlike any other organization the D. A. R. is responsible to the Government of the U. S. for their activities and a report of work done must be submitted to Congress each year. The workings of the society are fixed. Among the state officers who will be here to greet Mrs. Cook are Mrs. Eric Thorberg, Bismarck, State Regent; Mrs. Thomas Kane, Grand Forks, State Vice Regent; Mrs. H. L. Lincoln, Fargo, Recording Secretary; Mrs. John Bowers, Mandan, Corresponding Secretary; Mrs. Paul Johnson, Grand Forks, Treasurer; Mrs. A. M. Powell, Devils Lake, Registrar; Mrs. Kate Glaspell, Jamestown, Librarian; Mrs. J. Ross McKenzie, Carrington, Historian and Mrs. A. A. Stowell, Valley City, Chaplain.

The two entertaining chapters are Mandan of which Mrs. L. N. Cary is regent and Minnoshoshe Chapter of Bismarck with Mrs. F. L. Conklin as regent. The program includes as its speakers Governor Nestos, Judge Christianson, J. L. Bell, Mrs. Cook, Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Thorberg, Mrs. Powell and Mrs. Kane.

A luncheon will be given at Mandan. A ride will precede the luncheon and a dinner will be given at Bismarck.

Elopers Find Cupid's Knots Hard to Untie

An impromptu elopement of six girls and boys has thrown the legal machinery of Missouri and Kansas into a tangle. For the mums and papas have stepped into the marital life of the triple entente. When plans were laid to run away from Missouri to Olathe, Kas., and be married, there were but four. On the way, however, two more lovers were found and they joined the wedding party. A sleepy justice of the peace at midnight performed the three ceremonies. Now two of the boys would ask a divorce. But Kansas authorities say it will take more than "under age" to sever the knots. So while family lawyers seek a way out, the sextet has agreed to return to school this fall. The newlyweds are Mr. and Mrs. Roy Quade (left), Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Costello (center) and Mr. and Mrs. Harriet Hamilton (right).

THE SPINE SPECIALIST

No student of the human body knows as much about the spine as the Chiropractor. He has made it his particular study for a long time. He has, if proficient, become so adept that he has before him always the image of the bony structure and its dependent parts. In the same sense that the skilled surgeon knows where to make the incision in order to avoid veins and vitals, in an operation, so does the Chiropractor know the knowledge of spinal technique in discerning what constitutes normal alignment of the vertebrae and how to obtain that condition. Chiropractic is a science, and you are invited to approach it as such in seeking its assistance with reference to health. Consultation and Spinal Analysis Free.

No student of the human body knows as much about the spine as the Chiropractor. He has made it his particular study for a long time. He has, if proficient, become so adept that he has before him always the image of the bony structure and its dependent parts. In the same sense that the skilled surgeon knows where to make the incision in order to avoid veins and vitals, in an operation, so does the Chiropractor possess the knowledge of spinal technique in discerning what constitutes normal alignment of the vertebrae and how to obtain that condition. Chiropractic is a science, and you are invited to approach it as such in seeking its assistance with reference to health. Consultation and Spinal Analysis Free.

THE STATE'S OLDEST NEWSPAPER
(Established 1873)

STILL SATISFACTORY

The Literary Digest presidential poll, which has proved remarkably accurate in the past, continues to report "all's well" with the campaign for Calvin Coolidge. There is a slight decrease in the Coolidge vote as compared to the Harding vote of four years ago, but the decrease is so slight with 689,019 ballots cast, that the apparent trend toward the President is nothing short of remarkable. Harding went into office with the greatest popular majority ever polled, something over 8,000,000 lead over James Cox, the Democratic candidate. No such landslide has been expected for the Republican candidate, yet his vote continues to be close to that of Harding four years ago.

Returns from eighteen states in the poll show the President is leading in every state except Virginia and Texas, where Davis is ahead, and Wisconsin, where LaFollette polls a plurality. The Davis vote continues remarkably low. The showing made by the Democratic party is so bad that it lends great weight to the statement of Chairman Butler of the Republican National Committee that at the election Coolidge will poll a tremendous Democratic vote from those who wish to avoid the chaos that would result from throwing the election into the House of Representatives.

The Literary Digest poll, accepting it at face value, indicates Senator LaFollette will get a large vote in the country, but not enough to do what he hopes to do—tie up the election in the national legislature so that he may be using balance of power methods decide who shall be the next President.

The Literary Digest is charged with polling the "silk stocking" class as an explanation for the Coolidge vote. It also is charged by those who declare LaFollette is showing disproportionate strength in the poll that it is natural that LaFollette supporters should hurry in their votes, because they are seeking to create the impression that he has a chance of election. The poll probably is fairly representative. It has proved so in the past. And, if it means anything, it means that Calvin Coolidge will be elected President.

DEMOCRACY IN DANGER

Eternal, constant vigilance is the price of liberty. It is a cheap price. To win liberty, the early settlers of the United States had to fight wars—contribute their savings and endanger their lives. To preserve the liberty already attained, all we citizens have to do is vote and vote wisely.

For decades, an increasing percentage of American citizens have been neglecting to vote in the presidential elections. In 1920 this tendency culminated in a situation where over 25 million citizens failed to vote, while less than 27 millions voted.

That election was very close to government by minority. And government by minority imperils our democracy. You know and thrill at what the gallant Minute Man accomplished in Revolutionary days when America was winning its freedom.

Minute Men, to preserve this freedom by arousing the public to the dangers of not voting, are needed now as much as in 1776.

Vote, yourself. And make your self a committee to rouse relatives, friends and strangers with this Liberty Message. Vote without fail! Vote without fail! Vote without fail! YOUR vote is needed! YOUR vote is needed! YOUR vote is needed!

PRAYER AND PRAYER

Dr. William E. Gilroy's International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Sept. 21 is most interesting, but, in some respects, incomplete.

The crux of Dr. Gilroy's lesson lies in the fact that when at the height of popularity, Jesus went off into a solitary place to pray. "Jesus needed to pray. Grasp that fact well," urges Dr. Gilroy, who doesn't undertake to tell for what Jesus prayed.

What need could urge one who was without sin, one who was clothed with the love, wisdom and might of the All-wise, All-powerful? The answer is, the need of close communion with the Father.

A great many people resort to prayer only when they need something. They ask forgiveness of some certain sin or help in some particular trouble or endeavor, which is right, but they miss much of the comfort and happiness of prayer.

Little Tommy goes to his father with "I want a bicycle," or "I want new shoes," or "I need" this or that. Similar is the appeal of many good religious people to the Father of all. It is one sort of praying.

It is another sort when Tommy climbs up into father's lap with, "You are best of all. Love me. We are father and son, and I want to tell you how I love you." One who has missed such communion has never had all the hope, courage and happiness of prayer to the Father.

WORK IN VAIN

After 46 years of steady work, experts of the French Acad'my finish revising the dictionary from A to H. Just as they get ready to start on I, it's discovered that the French language has changed so much in 46 years they have to do their work all over again.

Observe, here, a basic principle of life. By the time we "solve" a social or economic problem, we find another problem has arisen. So goes the merry-go-round.

FORD'S ORGANIZATION

Henry Ford now has over 14,000 dealers throughout the world, selling his cars. Almost 10,000 of them are in America.

This certainly is a stupendous organization, and some may consider it the eighth wonder of the modern world.

Russia reminds us of a poor family in a rich neighborhood.

Editorial Review

Comments reproduced in this column may or may not express the opinion of The Tribune. They are presented here in order that our readers may have both sides of important issues which are being discussed in the press of the day.

POLITICAL PANIC IN NORTH DAKOTA

The best evidence of the turn of North Dakota in the direction of Coolidge is in the newly apparent doubt in the minds of the LaFollette managers of the certainty of success in November. This doubt is shown in the refusal of the LaFollette manager to file with the secretary of state the resignations of the four LaFollette electors, as agreed on at the state central committee meeting in Bismarck on September 3. At that time to sure were the LaFollette group that the state was lost to Coolidge, that they agreed to withdraw their nominees for elector from the Republican column and place them in the individual nominations column of the ballot under the names of LaFollette and Wheeler. But as the campaign has progressed, warning signs have indicated to the radicals that they had no such certainty. To assure themselves of it, they have finally decided to leave the LaFollette electors on the Republican column and nominate others to run under the LaFollette heading. This makes it a case of "heads I win, tails you lose," for the radicals. They thought they had a "sure thing" three weeks ago. Now they want to make it a sure thing by having both sets of electors LaFollette adherents.

To end this situation, Coolidge Republicans brought action on Monday before the Supreme court asking it to end a "procedure fraught with fraud and deceit," and to oust the radical electors from the Republican column. Whether the court grants the petition, or not, the stand of the radicals is a public confession that they fear to put the issue to the test in North Dakota and that their rock-sureness of the past few months has been followed by a desperate grasping at every tactical advantage that promises success. Even here they lose, for no people will sympathize with any legal trick that defrauds a Republican of his right to vote for the President and practically disfranchises him, nor will the odium of such a course fail to attach itself to the radical managers.

WHEAT PRICES—PRESENT AND FUTURE

Among the causes for strength in wheat and other grain prices, is the shortage of the European crop. Wheat in Canada is also a short crop and Winnipeg prices are steadily advancing.

The extent of the foreign shortage has been more clearly revealed in the last two weeks, which accounts for the large export sales. Judging by the world's shortage wheat in the United States, on the farm, is cheap at present prices. If the natural conditions of its sale are not obstructed by exporting firms and buying combinations, operating through the machinery of boards of trade, wheat, rye and other grain food should show higher prices in the next few weeks, and much higher before another crop is harvested.

The French wheat crop, according to the London Daily Mail, Paris edition, quoting French estimates, is 22,400,000 cwt. short, or about 40,000,000 bushels. The crop, both in France and North Africa is said to be at least that much short of the minimum requirements, which will have to be bought abroad. This accounts for the active bidding for American wheat the past week, and the advance in the face of rush of grain to market.

The price of bread is the most pressing problem the new government in France has to meet. As showing the extremities of the wheat shortage situation the French cabinet has ordered the prefects of France to enforce flour prices, to conform to recent regulations, and to increase the sale of meat and fish in the street markets. Strict laws to enforce food prices will be passed and an urgent appeal is made to all honest traders to aid in defeating speculation in food stuffs. Millers are instructed to grind coarser flour so as to waste as little grain as possible. The Daily Mail adds: "It is recognized however, that vast financial commitments will be necessary to cover the cost of purchase and transport of this wheat."

All of this has a direct bearing on North Dakota wheat growers this year. With less than one-third of the crop threshed in spite of the weather damage, the bulk of the crop should bring a much better price than now prevails; and competent commission firms, and others in the grain trade, as well as financial institutions and business concerns, look for wheat to sell as high as $1.50 per bushel, on the farm, before spring, and possibly even more.

ADVENTURE OF THE TWINS

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

THE ROAD TO JUM JUM LAND

The Sand Man and Nancy and Nick went skipping along the road that led from Squeezie Land to Jum Jum Land and the sea.

They were very happy because they had found the lost sleepy sand at last and as it was going on sundown, it was almost time for the Sand Man to start on his nightly travels over the house-tops. "Oh, the stars are so bright, that shine at night. Peep down like eyes at me, And the Dream Maker Man Works as fast as he can, Picking dreams off the Dreamland Tree."

Sang the Sand Man happily. And the Twins joined in the chorus. "Oh, the Dream Maker Man, Works as fast as he can Picking dreams off the Dreamland Tree."

They were so happy that they never noticed that the road had changed to cakes of soap, and slippery ones at that, for the mischief-makers had been at work.

Suddenly Nick's feet flew and Nancy's, flew and they fell down and rolled against the Sand Man and knocked him over, too, and the sleepy sand flew out of his hands and landed in a field of prickly pears.

Quick as a ball can bounce, Tweene jumped in and picked up the sleepy sand and ran off with it. "Ha, ha, ha! Hee, hee, hee!" the Twins and the Sand Man heard him giggle. "No sleep for the babies tonight!"

"Dear, dear!" said the Sand Man in a worried voice. "Now it's gone again after all our trouble! Here it is, almost moon-up and me without a drop of sleepy sand! It's all to do over again. We'll have to go right after that rascal, Tweene, and teach him a lesson."

Nancy and Nick got up and rubbed their bruises and bumps and helped the poor Sand Man to his feet. The slippery soap had disappeared as quickly as it had come.

If they had looked quite closely they would have seen a hundred little gnomes tugging and tugging all the soap cakes back to Gnomeland where Crookabone, the Gnome King, praised them.

"I always like to help a friend," he remarked. "I suppose Tweene is miles away by this time. Perhaps he's in the moon. If he goes far enough the Sand Man will surely be out of a job."

When the Twins finished rubbing their bruises, the Sand Man said, "You'll have to take your magic shoes, children, and go to all the cities and turn back the town clocks while I go to the moon and ask the Moon Man to please keep the moon back a little so people won't think it is so late. Perhaps we can still get the sleepy sand in time to put the babies to sleep."

"All right, Mister Sand Man," said Nancy. "And when we've turned all the clocks back, where shall we go?"

"Meet me on the moon at the Dream Maker's," said the Sand Man. "He lives on the edge of the Golden Forest with his three sons, Snoozle and Snuggle and Snore."

Don't jump at the conclusion, Sally, that I have been making love to a regular married woman. Mabel Carter has not lived with her husband for more than two years. It is one of the greatest tragedies I ever heard that parted them. She tells me that so heartily and unhappily was she that she never really cared whether she was divorced or not, until she fell in love with me.

She had made up her mind before that that she would have nothing more to do with men. One had nearly annihilated her body.

I wish you could have seen her when she told me her story. Sally. She is the sweetest, the prettiest little doll of a woman, you can possibly imagine—something you want to take in your arms and kiss her tears away. She is exactly the opposite of the great, splendid example of femininity that you are. I always felt young and boyish and immature when I was with you, Sally, but the moment I saw Mabel I wanted to take her in my arms and help her to bear her burden, if not take them all off of her shoulders.

I am quite sure I have already done this.

I wonder if you will remember her. Sally. There was a lot in the papers about her when you and Sam first came here, and she was very badly used, both by the court and the newspapers. She was not at all that croak. Her husband was unreasonably jealous of her. He shot that man and tried to kill her simply because, through a chain of unfortunate circumstances, the man had brought her home from downtown one cold, drizzly night in his limousine.

The murder trial was a sensational one, and the defense tried to make out that the murdered man and Mabel were lovers. But just to look at her, Sally, you would know that could not be.

I will be glad if Mr. Prescott does come over here and take the plant over, for I am sure you will come with him, and then you will be such a help to reinstate Mabel in the eyes of the world. Poor girl, she says her own sex have simply stretched her on the rack of torture, and that she has not a woman friend. I have told her that you are not that kind of a woman, Sally, and that I know you will love her as soon as you have seen her.

I am almost sure that Mr. Hamilton is no better. In fact, I think he is a little weaker every day, and grows a little more and more like a man, although as his private secretary, I am virtually manager here, and have been ever since he was taken ill. I will be very glad if someone else comes in to take some of the responsibility and hard work away from me. Mabel complains that I am working much too hard, and that I never have a day off except Sunday to be with her. When we go anywhere of an evening I am usually so tired that the moment I have eaten my dinner I want to go to sleep.

She says when she marries again she wants to have a husband who will play around with her. Poor child, I think she has never had much happiness, and I am going to try and give it to her.

You probably know a good deal about this new business deal, I wish you would write me about it, and

THE MONEY YOU SPEND

By Albert Apple

How much money did you spend during August? The American people combined spent about 36,000 million dollars. That's enough to give even a mathematician a headache. No human brain can really grasp such a gigantic figure.

It is difficult to understand how times can be dull instead of booming, when you ponder the money spent. August was a dull month, with thousands out of work and the average person "watching the pennies." Yet 36,000 million dollars spent by the American people during August was 6000 millions more than they paid out in August, 1923, when times were booming.

Spending makes prosperity—creates demand, gives jobs. But why were times better when people spent less?

Americans now are spending at an average rate three times as much as before the war.

This looks as if the cost of living is three times higher than in those good old days when you could buy a Sunday chicken dinner for 35 cents.

The National Industrial Conference Board insists the H. C. L. is 62 per cent (instead of 200) higher than pre-war. The board is not apt to exaggerate in this estimate, for it is the voice of 15,000 employers.

Where do we get this estimate that Americans spent 36,000 million dollars in August? Answer: Bank clearings the country over—the total of all checks written and sent through clearing houses for collection—totaled 35,670 millions. You add 5 per cent, for 95 per cent of business transactions are paid by check, 5 per cent by cash.

Divide total August spendings by the population and it looks as if $316 was spent for every man, woman and child. During one month? It couldn't be. The joker is that there are duplications in the totals. For instance, suppose a factory sells a suit of clothes to a jobber for $50 and he sells it to a retailer for $75 and the retailer passes it on to the consumer for $100. Now, if all pay by check, this $100 suit of clothes will represent $225 in bank check clearings in these three processes of moving it to market. Other duplications creep in, back yonder where the raw materials are collected, transported, etc.

Finance, after all, is simple—as simple as a Chinese puzzle.

New York, Oct. 4.—Just before the World War an ambitious Russian had taken his young daughter to Germany that her eyes, dimmed at birth, might be opened to see the beauties and wonders of a progressive world.

The operation was a success and the girl's sight was restored just as the war broke out. Father and daughter came to America, as had been originally planned, but without returning to Russia for mother and the remainder of the family.

Turmoil followed. The mother and babies could not get to the United States. The father, opening a small laundry in New York, slaved and saved for the coming of his flock.

It is related to me that he lived in such frugal fashion that he suffered. Then, a few weeks ago, with all arrangements made for the reunion of his long-separated family, he sent an apartment and furnished it with luxuries such as neither he nor his family ever before had known. No expense was spared to make the home a wonder mansion for his loved ones.

As time for the arrival of the boat came, the young Russian could scarce contain himself. He longed to take his wife and children to his bosom and nestle them forever—in reward for the years of loneliness.

The boat landed and his family came on the pier. His wife would have nothing to do with him. She would pay no attention, would listen to no idea.

On the journey to America, after her long years of mothering a brood, she fell in love with a younger man and has cast her lot with him.

The husband she had known only in dreams and memory for so long is heartbroken and forsaken. The lavishly furnished apartment has never been opened. Dust an inch thick has settled in it.

Last evening was spent with three generations of an interesting family. The grandfather, 81, plays the piano with nimble fingers; his daughter has bobbed hair, and her son is an aviator.

At three smoke cigarettes. All spend much time in the open. They live on Long Island in a quaint home, with a spacious garden surrounding it, just 22 minutes from Broadway.

Their home life is as domestic as in any small, western community. Radio, reading and early to bed. Yet they are sophisticated as those whose rooms overlook Times Square.

—Stephen Hannagan.

FABLES ON HEALTH—MAKING POULTICES

Old linen bags, if saved, can be turned into excellent home-made poultice containers for winter service. Mrs. Jones learned at the sewing club.

In making the poultices, fill the bag half full of the poultice mixture and then spread it flat by pressing between the palms.

If a boil or abscess is being treated, place a piece of sterilized linen over the sore; then wet lightly with olive oil and put on the plaster. If the applications must be hot, make several such bags and alternate them. When mustard plasters are used, wet with the white of an egg and the skin is not likely to be blistered. Wrap the poultices in soft flannel to keep in the heat and this also helps to abate severe pain.

To make a mustard poultice mix dry mustard with half its bulk of flour, wet to a soft paste and spread evenly, but keep it thinly distributed.

above all else, be sure and write Mabel a little note telling her you are glad to see me in love and happy—for to tell the truth, dear, I think she is just a little jealous of you. You and I both know she need not be.

Sincerely yours, JIM.

With ROOSEVELT IN AFRICA

by W. Robert Foran
© 1924 NEA Service Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Robert Foran, newspaper correspondent, accompanies the Theodore Roosevelt expedition into Africa in 1909. They arrive at Mombassa, the "gateway to British East Africa," and then make the long railroad journey to their first camp in the game-crowded Kapiti Plains.

After a wonderfully successful shooting trip in the Sotik country, the expedition camps for more hunting at a farm called Saigai-Sai. After several other trips they invade the Gungu Nyero elephant country. The Roosevelt expedition is given a royal reception at Entebbe. When they set off for a long, jungle-land journey through Uganda, Foran follows them two days afterward. Foran lies ill, and the first camp on Christmas night, and Roosevelt sends back word that he wants Foran to come on ahead and consult Dr. Mearns.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Naturally, I was very glad to avail myself of this generous offer, and I pushed on in my task as to their camp, leaving a native on the road to order my porters to follow me there as quickly as possible. I arrived in their camp at noon and in time to join them at lunch. I was most warmly greeted by Colonel Roosevelt and the rest of the party. "I was much surprised by the solicited interest displayed by Roosevelt in regard to my illness."

He left me in the care of Mearns, who made a thorough examination. "I am in doubt as to what that swelling is," said Mearns, thoughtfully. He had a puzzled look in his eyes. "Looks to me like a case of hernia, or else it's a place on the abdominal wall. One thing is certain, I'll have to operate; but it is better to wait until we get to Hoima. I've got no anaesthetic in camp."

That was that! Later, when Colonel Roosevelt heard that Mearns decided to operate, he offered to help in any way that he could. His interest in my welfare touched me deeply, and I was very grateful for his insistence that I should remain under Mearns' wing until the operation could be performed.

I found them all very delighted with their Uganda trip so far as it had gone, especially Colonel Roosevelt.

"I am delighted," he told me, "at having bagged so unexpectedly at bull elephant here. His tusks weighed 55 pounds each—not a big one, but in fine condition."

CHAPTER XXV
Among the Cow People of Unyoro

After lunch Colonel Roosevelt was persuaded to tell me about the killing of his first elephant in Uganda. "Directly we had camped here," he commenced, "some of the local natives arrived and begged us to rid them of four elephants who had been ruining their crops. They told me that one of the bulls had killed a villager a few days previously, while he was working in his banana plantation. They then told us that the four elephants had been seen, an hour earlier, at a spot only a few miles from our camp."

"Kermit Cunningham and I started off at once and less than two miles from our camp we saw the four elephants. The biggest bull charged me at sight, but I managed to bowl him over with my shot. The others then made off. All the time this was going on, we could hear the noise made by the power of the pitching camp. So, I can claim that I killed my first elephant in Uganda on the very threshold of my camp."

And that was the first—and only—elephant they killed in Uganda, for they had secured all the specimens they desired.

We had been traveling through the Ankole country, where people have cattle with immense horns. No cattle in the world possess bigger horns than these sleek and healthy-looking cattle, with coats as glossy as satin. Colonel Roosevelt had been much interested in these cattle, and Kermit had made a number of fine pictures of them.

I shall always remember Kisingo camp for the reason that there I first tasted elephant trunk soup. It was one of the delicacies provided at dinner that night. It was very rich and palatable, being not unlike oxtail soup, but very much thicker and stronger in flavor.

Six spoonfuls of this soup was a regular meal. The Roosevelt's always sampled dishes made from the different beasts they had killed, but they decided that elephant trunk soup and hippopotamus tongue were the most delicious of all their strange meals.

We struck camp at dawn and continued our march to Hoima. We were now entering the country of the Unyoro people. The roads were very muddy and sticky, for there had been a deluge of rain in the night, but we made very good speed, notwithstanding.

The whole nature of the country changed here. We climbed up by easy stages, through a regular elephant country to the top of a narrow ridge of rocky hills, from the summit of which we obtained our first distant view of the hills surrounding Albert Nyanza.

Kermit was the first to arrive in the new camp, and I was a good second in the race. When I halted at the camp, I found all the local Banyoro chiefs assembled, waiting at the entrance to the compound of the camp to do honor to Colonel Roosevelt. When he appeared in sight, headed by the American flag, a man beating a drum, and a small escort of the Uganda police, they all raised their hands above their heads, in salutation and then clapped hands vigorously—which latter is their usual form of salutation to a distinguished stranger.

The native tom-toms beat a vigorous tattoo until such time as Colonel Roosevelt had actually taken his seat under the shady banya; then the drums ceased, and the ceremony had concluded. Inside of the mess room, these natives had spread a white cloth under the grass thatch, and this made it very cool. As in all other camps, we found everything spotlessly clean.

The next night in camp we celebrated the dawn of a new year. We had marched at dawn, as usual, and had halted at midday at Aale—97 miles from Kampala.

Only one more camp now intervened between us and Hoima, and there I hoped to obtain relief from the great pain under Mearns had operated upon me.

The Banyoro people are among the most curious races in the whole of equatorial Africa. They are generally spoken of as the cow people, for they are powerful clansmen whose wealth and religion are connected with the peaceful domestic cow.

They have many strange customs and beliefs. It is considered a degradation for Banyoro men to dig or till the soil, so milk and meat are their most staple forms of diet. A few days after we had entered the Unyoro country, we noticed a number of sickness in every direction. Our inquiries elicited the information they were ghost shrines. When sickness comes to the Banyoro people, they say that it is one of their enemies—the ghosts of their ancestors—who is attacking them, so they proceed to capture the evil spirit.

Ghosts, they believe, like hot cooked meat. Therefore, meat is cooked in a large cooking pot near the dwelling but of the sick man or woman. As soon as the pleasant aroma of the meat reaches the dwelling, the Banyoro believe that the evil spirit enters the cooking pot to eat the feast. As soon as the food is cooked and ready, they seal it up. The potted ghost is then taken away from the village and buried in the ground, the place of interment being marked by the erection of a ghost shrine.

Another quaint belief of the Banyoro is that once a man has been enthroned as king of that country, his person becomes sacred. His food is restricted to milk and beef, which is obtained from a special and sacred herd of cows which are always kept apart from the other herds.

The king of Unyoro never permits himself to grow old or his faculties to become impaired. When he thinks himself likely to become seriously ill, he calls together a council of state, arranges the affairs of the kingdom with the principal chiefs—without giving them any reason for thinking that he is about to die—and dismisses them to carry out his instructions.

This important business safely accomplished, the king returns to his royal palace and summons his chief queen—they have many queens in their harem—and orders her to bring him a cup of powerful native poison with the same gummy name as he might use in asking for a bottle of milk. Then he drinks the contents of the poison cup at a gulp, and in a few minutes he is dead.

When the reigning monarch is comfortably dead by his own act, the chief queen calls to the palace guard to send the king's ministers to die and dismisses them to carry out his instructions.

In the meantime, the cabinet ministers and the council of state are making private arrangements to guard the king's corpse and to protect the sacred cattle during the king's death is known.

ELKS PRAISE RECEPTION IN TOWNS VISITED

School Children, Citizens,
Greet Bismarck Boosters
On Their Tour

Members of the Elks booster party, which traveled north yesterday, arrived here this morning from Garrison, happy over the trip. Some of the cars came in last night, but about half of the party remained in Garrison last night for a dance and other entertainment.

Leaving here yesterday morning, the boosters stopped first at Wilton, where the band gave a concert and citizens greeted them. Sandwiches and coffee were served by the Washburn Lignite Coal Company at its Chapin hotel. The next stop was Washburn for lunch.

In the afternoon the Elks party visited Falkirk, Underwood, Cole's harbor and arrived at Garrison about 4 p. m. School children were out at the last four towns as well as at Washburn. Underwood gave L. K. Thompson, secretary, the key to the city.

The Elks boosted their lodge, the corn show and North Dakota in general. They were well pleased over the hospitality of citizens in the towns visited.

WHEAT GLUTEN LITTLE LOWER, WEIGHT IS UP

Result of Tests of North Dakota Wheat Made Public
By Experts

Fargo, N. D., Oct. 4.—Tests of 314 samples from 44 counties of the state show an average gluten content of 11.22 per cent and an average test weight of 60.91 pounds per bushel, according to an announcement made today by C. E. Mangels, cereal chemist of the North Dakota Agricultural college.

The gluten content is slightly below that of last year, when the average was 13.35 per cent, but the average test weight is far in excess of that for a number of years. Of the 314 samples tested, more than two-thirds weighed 60 pounds or more per bushel. One sample weighed 65 pounds, 11 weighed 64 pounds, 51 weighed 63 pounds, 68 weighed 62 pounds, 44 weighed 61 pounds and 45 weighed 60 pounds. The lightest sample weighed 50 pounds, 4 weighed 54 pounds, 3 weighed 55 pounds, 9 weighed 56 pounds, and the balance ranged from 57 to 60 pounds.

Bowman county samples had the highest average test weight for any county, 63.5 pounds. Hettinger and Mercer were next with 63 pounds.

This is the first picture of Ramsay MacDonald's big limousine that's been causing all the rumpus over in Great Britain. It is charged that Sir A. Grant is defraying all expenses for it. Here the premier is seen standing beside it just before starting out on a speaking tour.

Barnes, 62.9 pounds, and Dickey and Ranson 62.6 pounds. With 44 samples Cass county averaged 62.3 pounds. Not more than 14 samples were received from any other county.

In gluten content Adams county led with an average of 13.18 per cent; Pierce was next with 12.65 per cent; Grand Forks, 12.43; Sioux, 12.28; Golden Valley, 12.27; Wells, 12.18; and Benson, 12.15. The highest individual sample tested 15.93 per cent gluten, a sample of Kota wheat from Fingal, Barnes county. Burleigh county samples weighed 60.5 pounds, with a gluten content of 9.75.

ENDURANCE CAR HERE!

After 98 hours 50 minutes traveling night and day, thru 125 towns in western North Dakota and eastern Montana, during which time—according to affidavits from the men who drove the car—the motor did not stop running—the STURDY, ECONOMICAL OVERLAND ENDURANCE CAR drove into Bismarck today at 11:50 a. m., running like a watch.

Fifteen Men Take Part

During this remarkable ENDURANCE RUN, fifteen men took part, either as driver or disinterested witnesses. Affidavits from these men will verify our statement that the motor ran continually from Tuesday 9 a. m. until today at 11:50 a. m. Not a town in western North Dakota or eastern Montana, is there that doesn't know the OVERLAND ENDURANCE CAR has been there—hundreds of people have placed their hand on the radiator to see if the motor was really cool under such a gruelling test, and then stood back and marveled as they listened to the motor purr away, waiting again to turn out on the long stretch—AN OVERWHELMING DEMONSTRATION OF OVERLAND ENDURANCE AND ECONOMY.
